THE CREATOR,
IN ONE
PARAGRAPH

Ethan Gaskill is a Los Angeles based home, style, and beauty creator. 483.4K on TikTok, 196K on Instagram, 16.1M total likes. He films his life out of a single restored Spanish bungalow in the Hollywood Hills, lets product enter the frame only after the room earns it, and built his audience on a deliberately slow editorial tone, the opposite of haul culture. He is the founder of the fragrance house Elsewhere and the agency Insight Social.

Content, sorted into categories.

Mix across the last 90 days, weighted by upload count. Home leads, but the channel reads as a single voice, Ethan's editing rhythm and color palette are consistent across pillars, which is what lets a brand campaign live inside the feed without breaking the line.

STYLE & WARDROBE	Try-on hauls, GRWM, designer pieces, Isabel Marant, Fred Segal, Our Legacy. Editorial-leaning, never trend-chasing.
BEAUTY & SKINCARE	Routines, slow-morning sequences, Nécessaire-coded body care. Functions as cross-sell into home.
STORY & WELLNESS	Hoffman process, body image, growing up queer, healing. Highest comment volume per post. Sparingly used, brand-safe.

THE FIT, ON PAPER

WHY ETHAN FOR HAVEN

Haven sells slow furniture to people who would rather wait six months for the right chair than buy two wrong ones. Ethan's audience already speaks that language, his top-saved videos are the ones where he doesn't hard-sell. The match was tonal before it was demographic.

His viewers skew 25 to 34, female-leaning, US metro, household income $75 to 200K. Haven's customer file overlaps by an estimated 62%.

WHAT HE IS NOT

He is not a haul creator. He is not a hype channel. He does not produce viral one-shots designed for the algorithm. Anyone briefing him for performance-style asks (countdown overlays, urgency captions, claim stacks) will get a polite no.

The right brief gives him space to live with the product, then talk about it.

The headline. In one breath.

Twelve posts. 14.6 million views, 9.4% engagement, and a creator audience that opted in, not out, when the brand softened its pitch. Haven did not buy reach; it earned permission.

READ THIS IF YOU READ NOTHING ELSE	WHAT WORKED	WHAT TO FIX
	The campaign's two highest-performing posts (P03 reveal, P06 storytime) put the product in service of Ethan's voice rather than in the foreground. Slow pacing, vulnerability, and a long-arc tour series produced 4.2× more saves than the brand's prior performer-led ads. The Joshua Tree shoot (P10 to P11) validated travel as a viable third pillar, view-time was on par with the home tentpole, and CTR to havenstudio.com peaked at 4.2% on the pack-with-me.	One underperformer (P08, "Sunday reset"): the brief was soft, the hook landed at 2.1s instead of 0.8s, and IG Reels punished it. Cut ASMR-format briefs unless paired with a strong visual cold-open. Comment-thread analysis suggests we are under-shipping the entry price story. 870+ comments referenced affordability or aspiration. Worth a dedicated post in the next flight.

"I'm not trying to sell you the chair. I waited six months for it and it's the right chair, that's the whole video."

THE BRIEF, RESTATED

Haven Studio approached Ethan with a Spring/Summer drop and a question: can a furniture brand be remembered for tone, not promotion? We built a four-phase calendar that asked Ethan to live with the product first and talk about it second.

PHASE	TITLE	WEEKS	POSTS	STRATEGIC GOAL

P. 40 TO 47

LOOKING UP FROM THE CAMPAIGN

Ethan is a home creator who happens to dress well, travel often, and bring real friends into the room. The next year of his work should treat those as pillars, not detours. Below: the three doors we'd open, the order we'd open them, and how Haven (and adjacent brands) should plug in.

REC 01 · HIGH CONVICTION

Travel as a pillar, not a vacation post.

Joshua Tree alone produced 2.7M views and the campaign's highest CTR. Audience comments asked for the itinerary 1,910 times. The signal is unambiguous: Ethan's audience wants to travel with him, not just look at his apartment.

Home design, but make it a system.

Ethan's audience does not want a shopping list, they want a worldview. The 'How I styled the Astrid bookshelf 3 ways' tutorial (P07) had the campaign's highest save-rate at 3.5%. Lean into editorial how-to: principles, then product.

FORMAT	ADJACENT REVENUE	WHAT TO DROP
Monthly "Room School", one room, one principle (light, scale, friction). Long-form tutorial on TikTok, with carousel companion on IG. Each episode anchors to a featured Haven (or co-branded) piece.	License this format. A 6-episode series with Architectural Digest's TikTok or a partnership with Domino would put Ethan inside the editorial design conversation, not adjacent to it.	Pure product-haul posts. They are the lowest-saved format in the calendar. Lead with the principle; the product earns its way in.

YEAR-ONE EPISODE SLATE (PROPOSED)

EP	ROOM	PRINCIPLE	HAVEN PLUG	FORECAST VIEWS
E01	Living	Scale & restraint	Travis chair, Marlow rug	2.4 to 3.2M

Q4 2026

Creator collaborations, built like a guest column.

The single collab in this flight (P09, with Jess Macdonald) outperformed both creators' solo averages by 18%. Treat collaborations not as cross-promotion but as Ethan guest-editing another creator's space. The brand pays for the editorial set, not the impression.

FORMAT	TARGET COLLABORATORS	WATCH-OUTS
"Decorated By", Ethan visits another creator's apartment and styles one room with them across two posts (his + theirs). Stays small (1 room, 1 budget). No more than 4 per year.	Cross-pillar lifts: a food creator (Eitan Bernath), a fashion creator (Reese Blutstein), a travel creator (Jared Garfield). Reach beyond home-tok, that audience already follows him.	Collabs collapse when brand presence dominates. Cap brand mentions at 2 per post. Pay collaborators directly; do not route through Ethan. The brand sponsors the project, not the friendship.
